Online Symposium on Redesigning student Learning Experience in Higher Education 2021

This online Symposium on Redesigning Student Learning Experience in Higher Education (RSLEIHE) is co-organised by the HERDSA (Higher Education Research and Development Society of Australasia) Hong Kong Branch, Hong Kong Baptist University, Lingnan University, The Chinese University of Hong Kong, The Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, and The University of Hong Kong.

The RSLEIHE is a student award scheme aiming to create and share local examples of student-centred, student-initiated, future-orientated teaching and learning experiences that can engage and empower students and directly meet their future needs in a meaningful manner. The award scheme was initiated in 2017 to celebrate the 20th Anniversary of the HERDSA Hong Kong Branch and to strengthen our strategies for advancing higher education.

The main theme is Learning in the Era of “New Normal”: Post-Pandemic Learning. In this Symposium, 17 shortlisted student project teams from 7 local universities will share with us what they have learned in their projects in particular the implication and recommendations for teaching and learning in higher education.

It is anticipated that the projects will demonstrate various possible approaches to develop Student-Staff Partnership in Hong Kong higher education. All colleagues and students are welcome to join the symposium and to engage in the dialogue on redesigning student learning experience in higher education.
